

Minnesota State Fire Code states that these and others like them without over-current protection are not allowed in residential housing units. Fines could be up to and including: 30 days in jail and $1,000.00 fine!

Only power strips with an over-current protection fuse and switch are approved for use.